Catholic Trivia

After the 1939 Nazi invasion of Poland, St. Maximilian Kolbe shaved his beard so as not to stand out.

Relic - Beard

Aug. 14 is the feast day of St. Maximilian Kolbe, a saint best known for his heroic martyrdom at Auschwitz in 1941, when he volunteered to be executed in place of another prisoner.

The only part of Maximilian Kolbe's body that still exists is his signature long beard, which a fellow friar managed to save before the saint's death. The rest of his body was incinerated in Auschwitz after the Nazis murdered him.

The friars of the Franciscan Missionaries of the Eternal Word keep a relic of Kolbe's beard, gifted to EWTN.

Kolbe, also a Franciscan friar, chose to keep the beard he had grown upon his return from six years of missionary work in Japan. In those days, it was customary for missionaries to grow long beards, and Kolbe wanted to keep it as a reminder of his missionary days and as a reminder to always be a "missionary" of the Gospel.

Kolbe eventually, after the 1939 Nazi invasion of Poland, made the decision to shave so as not to stand out. Kolbe's founding of the Militia Immaculata (MI), an evangelization movement identifying with Mary, had put him high on Nazi watchlists.

After a fellow friar cut off Kolbe's beard for him, the friar at first tried to save the beard, but Kolbe objected and told him to throw it in the stove. So, obediently, the friar threw it into the stove, but the fire was not lit, so the friar later retrieved it and stored it in a pickle jar, where it was later rediscovered and identified thanks to the label the friar had put on the jar.

Kolbe's inspiring example of love and charity during his imprisonment and death by carbolic acid injection have led many to seek his intercession for those battling substance abuse.
